Top 5 Reasons to Keep the IRS Off Your Health Care

1. When it comes to an individual's personal health care decisions, no American should be required to answer to the IRS – an agency that has forfeited its claim to a reputation of impartiality.
2. Allowing the IRS to enforce Obamacare is opening up the door to more abuse, more targeting and more harassment of American citizens.
3. The myriad of new taxes the IRS will impose under the guise of health care reform will destroy jobs, stifle economic growth, and impede medical innovation in this country.
4. Sarah Hall Ingram, the individual who previously oversaw the tax exemption department at the IRS which targeted and abused American citizens is now running the division of the IRS focused on implementing Obamacare – despite the fact that there are legitimate and important questions regarding what role she might have played in the IRS's harassment of conservative and religious organizations.
5. The magnitude of information collection and data sharing by the IRS in its role helping to facilitate Obamacare's Federal Data Services Hub raises obvious and incredibly serious privacy concerns.
